

Tech Escape — SEL Notifications

Two Truths & One Lie — Teacher Review Packet

These are the text-message style notifications that pop up during Tech Escape while students explore the haunted computer lab. Each scenario has two true statements and one lie. Students must spot the lie before the timer runs out.

- 50 scenarios total
- 25 Digital Citizenship
- 25 Social Emotional Learning

How to use this packet

Each page shows TRUTH and LIE labels for review only — students do not see these in the game. Use the notes box to suggest edits or new scenarios. Return feedback to update the game bank.

Source: `src/site/tech-escape/js/data/twoTruths.js`

Generated: 2026-08-17 · DVA Media Arts & Tech

Jordan

Someone posted a screenshot of our private group chat in the school story 😬

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Screenshots can spread even when you thought a chat was private.

TRUTH

B Deleting the original message always removes every copy people saved.

LIE

C If you share a screenshot without asking, you can hurt trust and break school rules.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Deleting a message only removes it from the chat app — not from screenshots, forwards, or saved photos. Before you share anything from a private chat, ask the people involved or leave it out. If something already leaked, tell a trusted adult instead of reposting it.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Maya

They kicked me from the Minecraft server and said it was "just a joke"

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Being left out on purpose can feel as bad as in-person exclusion.

TRUTH

B A joke stops being funny when the person on the receiving end says it hurts.

TRUTH

C If you ignore exclusion online, it usually fixes itself without anyone saying anything.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Online exclusion rarely resolves on its own — silence often lets it continue. If you are excluded, it is okay to step away, talk to someone you trust, or ask a moderator for help. If you see it happening, checking in with the person left out is a small act that matters.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Devon

Someone in voice chat keeps saying slurs "because it is just the game"

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Voice chat rules are different from school, so anything goes there.

LIE

B Hate speech in a game lobby can still get you reported or banned.

TRUTH

C Muting or leaving a toxic voice channel protects your mood and focus.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Game platforms have community standards, and hate speech can lead to bans or reports to school when it involves classmates. Muting, leaving, or reporting protects you. If it involves someone from school, save evidence and tell a trusted adult — "it is just a game" is not a free pass to harm others.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Aisha ✨

My friend posted a mean meme about someone in our grade

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Laughing at a mean post can encourage more bullying.

TRUTH

B Sharing a bullying post to "warn people" always helps the victim.

LIE

C You can be an upstander by not engaging and supporting the person targeted.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Reposting bullying content spreads it further and can embarrass the victim again. Upstanders refuse to pass it along, report it on the platform, and check in privately with the person hurt. Warning others is better done by telling an adult who can handle it safely.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Chris

My best friend asked for my Instagram password "just for one day"

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Sharing passwords gives someone full control of your account and DMs.

TRUTH

B A real friend will understand if you say no to sharing login info.

TRUTH

C Sharing passwords with one close friend is safe if you trust them completely.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Even trusted friends can accidentally post, get hacked, or feel pressured to share what they see. Passwords are personal — use strong unique ones and never trade them. If someone pushes back when you say no, that is useful information about the friendship.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Riley

There is drama in the group chat and I do not want to pick sides

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Staying neutral online means you should never tell an adult about serious conflict.

LIE

B You can care about friends without joining every argument.

TRUTH

C Taking a pause before replying can stop a fight from growing.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Neutral does not mean silent about harm. You can avoid picking sides while still reporting threats, harassment, or anything that feels unsafe. Pausing, using "I" statements, and moving heated talks offline or to a mediator are healthy ways to stay out of drama without ignoring real problems.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Sam

Someone took a photo of me at lunch and wants to post it

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A You have the right to say no to a photo being posted, even in public.

TRUTH

B If you are in the background of a photo, you legally cannot ask for it to be taken down.

LIE

C Once a photo is online, you cannot fully control who sees or saves it.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

You can always ask friends not to post you, and many schools treat non-consensual posting as a digital citizenship issue. If someone ignores your no, talk to a trusted adult. Being in the background does not erase your right to privacy and respect.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Taylor

I stayed up until 2 a.m. gaming and my mom took my console

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Losing sleep can make mood, grades, and friendships harder the next day.

TRUTH

B Talking about screen limits calmly works better than hiding your usage.

TRUTH

C Parents who set screen-time rules never understand gaming or social life.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Many parents set limits because they care about sleep and balance, not because they "do not get it." Hiding usage usually breaks trust. Try proposing a schedule, using built-in timers, or agreeing on a check-in — negotiation beats sneaking every time.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Priya

There is a rumor on TikTok about someone in our school

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A If a rumor has lots of views, it is probably accurate.

LIE

B Rumors online can reach people faster than hallway gossip.

TRUTH

C Checking whether a claim is true before sharing protects everyone involved.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Views measure attention, not truth. False rumors can ruin reputations in hours. Pause before reposting, look for reliable sources, and avoid naming people in speculation. If something is harmful or threatening, report it and tell a trusted adult.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Marcus

I saw someone getting piled on in the comments and did not know what to do

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A A single supportive comment can help a target feel less alone.

TRUTH

B Comment-section pile-ons are harmless because nobody knows the person in real life.

LIE

C Reporting abusive comments is different from starting more drama.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Online harassment hurts even when it is "just comments," and classmates often recognize each other. Reporting, blocking, or a kind DM to the person targeted are upstander moves. Joining the pile-on adds harm — you do not need a perfect speech to make a difference.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Elena

An anonymous app at school has people posting secrets about classmates

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Anonymous does not mean untraceable — platforms and schools can investigate serious posts.

TRUTH

B Mean anonymous posts can still count as bullying or harassment.

TRUTH

C Anonymous apps guarantee that nobody can ever find out who posted.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Anonymous apps often cooperate with schools or law enforcement when safety is at risk, and metadata can sometimes identify users. Treat anonymous spaces like public ones: do not post secrets about others, and report threats. If you are targeted, save screenshots and tell an adult.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Noah 🙄

I typed something mean when I was mad and now the whole chat saw it

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Once you apologize in chat, everyone has to forgive you immediately.

LIE

B Anger can make us write things we would not say face to face.

TRUTH

C A sincere apology and giving space can start to repair trust.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Apologies matter, but healing takes time and the other person chooses when they are ready. Follow up with changed behavior, not repeated demands for forgiveness. If you are upset, draft offline, wait ten minutes, or talk in person before sending.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Zoe

My teacher said our digital footprint follows us — is that real?

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Old posts and usernames can show up in searches years later.

TRUTH

B Kids' online posts disappear automatically when they turn eighteen.

LIE

C Thinking before you post helps protect future opportunities.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

The internet rarely forgets on its own. Posts, tags, and comments can be screenshotted or archived. You can clean up accounts, adjust privacy settings, and post thoughtfully going forward — but assume what you share could be seen by colleges, employers, or future you.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Jayden

My friend has not replied in three days and I think they are mad at me

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Delayed replies can mean someone is busy, overwhelmed, or offline.

TRUTH

B Asking gently if everything is okay is better than sending ten messages.

TRUTH

C If someone does not reply instantly, they are definitely ending the friendship.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Silence has many explanations — sports, family stuff, phone limits, or needing space. Assumptions often create conflict that was not there. One calm check-in is fine; flooding someone with messages usually adds pressure. If patterns worry you, talk to a trusted adult.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Fatima

Someone in Discord DMed me a link to "free Robux"

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Too-good-to-be-true offers often steal accounts or install malware.

TRUTH

B If a link comes from a friend's account, it is always safe to click.

LIE

C Reporting and blocking suspicious DMs protects you and others.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Accounts get hacked and impersonate friends all the time. Verify through another channel before clicking. Never enter your password on unofficial sites. Use official app stores, enable two-factor authentication, and tell an adult if you already clicked something suspicious.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Leo

Two friends want me to join a group call to "confront" someone

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A More people on a call always makes conflict resolution fairer.

LIE

B Group confrontations online can escalate fast and leave lasting hurt.

TRUTH

C Suggesting a calm one-on-one talk or involving a mediator is safer.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Piling on someone in a group call often feels like ambush, not fairness. Conflict de-escalation works best with clear goals, privacy, and respect. You can decline to join, propose talking to a counselor, or message the person privately if it feels safe.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Hannah

My cousin wants to borrow my phone to "just check something real quick"

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Unlocked phones can expose private messages, photos, and saved passwords.

TRUTH

B It is okay to say no or to supervise what someone does on your device.

TRUTH

C Letting anyone use your logged-in phone has zero privacy risks.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

A logged-in phone is access to your whole digital life — DMs, banking apps, location, and accounts. Offer to look something up for them instead, or log out of sensitive apps first. Boundaries around devices are normal and smart.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Omar

I laughed at a meme that made fun of someone\

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Online jokes about appearance do not affect people because they are "not real."

LIE

B Humor that targets how someone looks can damage self-esteem.

TRUTH

C You can tell friends you are not comfortable with that kind of joke.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Targets often see those posts, and laughter signals approval to everyone watching. You can un-like, speak up, or change the subject. Kindness online means remembering a real person is on the other side of the screen.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Grace

Should I report something mean I saw, or is that snitching?

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Reporting threats or repeated harassment helps keep communities safer.

TRUTH

B Reporting always gets the reporter in trouble with their friends.

LIE

C Gossiping about what someone did is different from telling a trusted adult.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Reporting serious harm is responsible, not snitching — gossip spreads rumors for entertainment. Platforms and schools use reports to stop bullying and threats. You can report anonymously on many apps. Real friends do not pressure you to stay silent about safety.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Kai

I got into a heated debate in comments and my heart is racing

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Strong emotions can narrow your thinking and make replies harsher.

TRUTH

B Stepping away from the screen helps your body calm down.

TRUTH

C Winning an online argument is more important than staying respectful.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

No comment section trophy is worth damaging relationships or your reputation. When you feel activated, close the app, drink water, or move around. Return later if you still want to discuss — or agree to disagree. Respect outlasts "winning."

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Isabella

A classmate made a fake account pretending to be me

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Fake accounts are harmless if they only post silly jokes.

LIE

B Impersonation can violate platform rules and school policies.

TRUTH

C Saving evidence and reporting the account is a smart first step.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Impersonation can spread false information, embarrass you, or harm your reputation — even as a "joke." Report the profile, tell a trusted adult, and warn close friends it is not you. Schools take identity impersonation seriously when it affects students.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Tyler

My team group chat turned toxic after we lost a game

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Blaming one player publicly can hurt the whole team's trust.

TRUTH

B Venting anger at teammates in chat always makes teams play better.

LIE

C Private feedback or a reset message can refocus the group.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Public blame creates fear and resentment, not better performance. If you are upset, cool off first. Constructive talk works one-on-one or after everyone calms down. If chat stays toxic, mute notifications and loop in a coach or adult.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Nina

Someone wants to livestream our hangout without asking everyone

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Livestreams can show faces, locations, and conversations to strangers.

TRUTH

B Everyone present should agree before going live or recording.

TRUTH

C If you are in the room, you automatically consent to being streamed.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Consent matters for recordings and livestreams — people may have privacy, safety, or family reasons to opt out. Ask the group out loud, not just in chat. If someone streams anyway, leave the frame and tell an adult if you feel unsafe.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Ben

I sent a text and they left me on read — should I spam them?

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Being left on read always means the other person hates you.

LIE

B Repeated messages can feel overwhelming or pushy.

TRUTH

C Giving space shows respect for the other person's timing.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Read receipts show delivery, not feelings. People pause replies for many reasons. One follow-up after a day is reasonable; a burst of messages rarely helps. If communication patterns concern you long-term, talk it out calmly or seek advice from someone you trust.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Amara

Our school project needs a shared password for one account

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Shared classroom accounts should use passwords teachers control and rotate.

TRUTH

B Reusing the same password everywhere is a good way to remember it.

LIE

C Using your personal password for a school login is risky.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Reusing passwords means one leak compromises every account. Use unique passwords — or a manager your family approves — and never recycle your personal login for group projects. Teachers can create shared credentials safely without students trading private ones.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Dylan 🎭

People are subtweeting someone in our grade and I know who they mean

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Vague posts can still hurt because the target often recognizes themselves.

TRUTH

B Choosing not to like or share subtweets reduces their reach.

TRUTH

C Subtweets are fine because they never name anyone directly.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Subtweeting is indirect bullying — the target usually knows, and so do bystanders. Engaging rewards the behavior. If it is about you or a friend, save evidence and talk to a trusted adult. Kindness means addressing conflict directly or not at all.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Sophie

I found someone\

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A If a post is public, reposting it to embarrass someone is always fair game.

LIE

B Digging up old posts to mock someone is a form of harassment.

TRUTH

C People grow and deserve not to be defined by one old moment.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Public does not mean permission to humiliate. Resurfacing old content to mock someone can violate platform harassment rules and school conduct expectations. Delete what you shared, apologize if needed, and practice empathy — you would want the same grace someday.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Andre

My friend said "no offense" right before insulting someone in chat

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Saying "no offense" does not remove the sting of hurtful words.

TRUTH

B Online insults do not count if the speaker says they are joking afterward.

LIE

C You can call out unkind comments without attacking the person.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Impact matters more than intent labels like "just joking." You can say, "That came across mean — let us keep it respectful." If you spoke harshly, own it and apologize specifically. Jokes that punch down are not required for friend groups to have fun.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Lily

A stranger in my game keeps asking where I go to school

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Personal details like school name and schedule can be used to find you.

TRUTH

B You can decline personal questions and still keep playing.

TRUTH

C Sharing your school name with online strangers is safe if you are in a party voice chat.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Strangers may not be who they claim — age, location, and intentions can be faked. Keep real-world details private, use generic usernames, and block or report pushy behavior. Tell a trusted adult if someone persists or makes you uncomfortable.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Jasmine

I want to support a friend who is being talked about online

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A You must publicly defend them in every comment thread to be a good friend.

LIE

B A private check-in shows you care without adding public drama.

TRUTH

C Listening without demanding every detail respects their boundaries.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Public fights can escalate and sometimes embarrass the person you want to help. Ask what they need — company, reporting help, or adult support. Small private gestures often matter more than heroic comment battles.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Caleb

I got an email saying my account will be deleted unless I click now

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Urgent threats in messages are a common phishing tactic.

TRUTH

B If an email looks official, the link inside is always legitimate.

LIE

C Going directly to the official site or app is safer than clicking email links.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Scammers mimic logos and urgent language to rush you. Never click — open the app or type the URL yourself. Report phishing and tell an adult if you entered credentials. Real companies rarely threaten instant deletion by email alone.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Morgan

Two friend groups are fighting and want me to share screenshots

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Forwarding private messages can break trust with both sides.

TRUTH

B Encouraging people to talk directly reduces triangle drama.

TRUTH

C Sharing screenshots always clears up who is right faster.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Screenshot wars usually deepen conflict and expose private words out of context. Decline to be the messenger, suggest a mediated conversation, or involve an adult if it is serious. Your loyalty can be to kindness and privacy, not to carrying gossip.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Ruby

Is it okay to repost someone's

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A If it is on the internet, anyone can repost it without credit.

LIE

B Creators deserve credit when you share their work.

TRUTH

C Asking permission respects their time and ownership.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Copyright and community norms still apply online. Credit the artist, link the original, or ask first — many creators say yes when asked respectfully. Uncredited reposts can get your account reported and hurt artists who rely on visibility.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Ethan 🌙

I said something in a voice channel that sounded harsher than I meant

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Tone is easy to misread when you cannot see someone's face.

TRUTH

B Voice chat tone is always obvious so misunderstandings never happen.

LIE

C Clarifying your intent privately can prevent lasting misunderstandings.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Sarcasm and frustration land differently without visual cues. If you misspoke, say so clearly: "That came out wrong — I did not mean it that way." If you are on the receiving end, ask before assuming the worst. Moving tough talks to video or in person can help.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Valentina

My friend tagged our exact location at the mall in their story

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Location tags can reveal where you are in real time to wide audiences. TRUTH

B You can ask friends not to tag you or post your location. TRUTH

C Location tags only show city names, never specific places you visit. LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Many apps tag precise venues and update in real time. That can inform strangers or people you would not invite. Turn off location for posts, review tags before they go live, and discuss boundaries with friends about when check-ins are okay.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Quinn

Someone sent me a "truth or dare" list that gets really personal

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A You owe complete honesty to anyone who DMs you a dare list.

LIE

B You can refuse questions that feel too private or uncomfortable.

TRUTH

C Pressure to answer everything is a sign the game is not safe.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Games that push for secrets, photos, or insults cross boundaries fast.

"No" is a full sentence — you do not owe explanations. If someone keeps pushing, block, report, and tell a trusted adult. Real friends respect limits.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Imani A TikTok trend asks students to rate teachers — should I join?

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Publicly rating adults can violate school rules and hurt reputations.

TRUTH

B Trends are harmless if deleting the video within an hour erases all impact.

LIE

C Trends that mock real people can have consequences beyond views.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Videos can be screenshotted, reuploaded, or seen by staff before you delete. Rating or mocking teachers can lead to discipline and damaged relationships. Choose trends that do not target real people, or skip them — your future self will thank you.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Jackson

My friend vented about me in a private story I was not meant to see

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Finding out secondhand can hurt — your feelings are valid.

TRUTH

B A calm conversation later works better than firing back publicly.

TRUTH

C If they vented online, you should expose their story to everyone immediately.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Retaliating by sharing their private story spreads more pain and makes you part of the problem. Cool off, then talk directly or with a mediator. If venting included lies or harassment, involve an adult — but revenge posts rarely fix friendships.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Sara

I use the same username everywhere — is that a problem?

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Usernames never connect across apps so criminals cannot trace you.

LIE

B Consistent usernames can link your gaming, social, and school identities.

TRUTH

C Separate usernames for public and private spaces add a layer of privacy.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Search tools and determined strangers can connect dots across platforms. Consider different handles for gaming versus personal social life, and avoid usernames with birth years or full names. Privacy is about making linking harder, not impossible.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Micah □

I want to compliment someone online but worry it will seem weird

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Specific, kind comments can brighten someone's day.

TRUTH

B Kind comments online always come across as flirting or creepy.

LIE

C Compliments about effort or character land better than appearance-only remarks.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Thoughtful kindness is rarely creepy — tone and context matter. "Your project explanation helped me" or "Thanks for standing up for them" feels genuine. Avoid repeated DMs after someone does not reply, and respect boundaries if they seem uncomfortable.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Olivia

Someone posted a threat toward our school in a group chat

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Threats should be reported to a trusted adult immediately. TRUTH

B Do not forward threats widely — that can spread panic and tip off harmful actors. TRUTH

C Online threats are never serious if they use jokes or memes. LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Schools and law enforcement assess every threat — "joke" defenses do not make them safe. Tell an adult right away, save evidence, and avoid reposting. Spreading threats can interfere with investigations and frighten classmates unnecessarily.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Ryan

We are planning a surprise party but the guest of honor is in the chat

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Keeping secrets in a shared group chat always works if you tell everyone "no spoilers."

LIE

B Surprises can backfire if the person feels left out of planning threads.

TRUTH

C A separate chat or code words reduce accidental spoilers.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Notifications, accidental replies, and curious scrolling ruin surprises fast. Move planning to a chat without the guest or use a label like "gift committee." If they feel hurt by secrecy, explain kindly — empathy matters as much as the surprise.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Keisha

Someone asked me to send homework answers over Snap

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Sharing graded work can count as cheating for both people.

TRUTH

B Sending answers privately never counts as cheating if the teacher does not see it.

LIE

C Offering to explain concepts helps without copying answers.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Cheating policies cover sharing work even in DMs — and you both risk consequences. Helping means discussing steps, not photographing answers. If you are stuck, ask the teacher, a tutor, or a classmate for legitimate study help.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Alex □

I compared my life to influencers and felt terrible all day

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Curated feeds often show highlights, not everyday reality.

TRUTH

B Taking breaks from accounts that hurt your mood is self-care.

TRUTH

C If someone looks perfect online, their life is definitely better than yours.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Filters, staging, and selective posting hide normal struggles. Comparison steals joy from your real life. Mute or unfollow triggers, follow diverse creators, and talk to someone if scrolling consistently brings you down.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Brooke

My little cousin keeps mic-spamming in our family game night call

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A There is no way to manage voice chat behavior without yelling at people.

LIE

B Muting disruptive mics keeps the session fun for everyone.

TRUTH

C Explaining voice-chat etiquette calmly can teach younger kids.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Platform mute controls, push-to-talk settings, and clear family rules work better than shouting. Kids often need one simple rule at a time. Model calm communication — gaming together is a chance to practice digital citizenship at home.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Daniel

People are misgendering a classmate in an online fan server

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Using someone's chosen name and pronouns shows respect.

TRUTH

B Pronouns online do not matter because nobody uses real names anyway.

LIE

C Correcting gently — "they use she/her" — can support the person targeted.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Chosen names and pronouns matter in digital spaces too — misgendering can harm mental health and violate server rules. If you mess up, apologize briefly and try again. Support classmates by backing their identity consistently, online and off.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Yuki

My phone auto-backed up photos I did not want saved to the cloud

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Cloud backups can sync sensitive photos across devices and accounts.

TRUTH

B Reviewing backup and privacy settings helps you control what is stored.

TRUTH

C Deleted photos always disappear from every backup instantly everywhere.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Backups and shared family accounts can keep copies after you delete locally. Check Google Photos, iCloud, or similar settings with a parent or guardian. Turn off auto-upload for sensitive folders and use device passcodes to protect privacy.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Nate

I accidentally liked an old post while stalking someone\

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A One accidental like always ruins your reputation permanently at school.

LIE

B Accidental likes happen — most people do not make a big deal of one notification.

TRUTH

C Obsessively checking someone's profile can increase anxiety more than it helps.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

A single like is usually forgotten in a day. If it feels awkward, you can laugh it off or leave it — do not spiral. If profile-checking stresses you out, mute the account and focus on offline friendships and hobbies that build confidence.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Camila

Our club wants to post student full names and photos on a public page

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Families should consent before student names and faces go fully public.

TRUTH

B School clubs can post any student info online without permission.

LIE

C Using first names only or group shots can reduce privacy risks.

TRUTH

Why the lie is wrong

Many districts require media releases for public identification of minors. Leaders should collect permission slips or use privacy-friendly formats. If you are uncomfortable being posted, say so — adults can adjust plans to include you safely.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

Jordan

End of unit — what is the best mindset for being online tomorrow?

Which one is the lie? (Students do not see TRUTH/LIE labels in the game.)

A Pause before posting when emotions are high.

TRUTH

B Ask for help from trusted adults when something feels wrong.

TRUTH

C The best online strategy is never making mistakes so you never need help.

LIE

Why the lie is wrong

Everyone slips up online — growth comes from repairing harm and learning. Pausing, seeking help, and practicing empathy beat pretending perfection. Digital citizenship is a habit you build one choice at a time, not a score you either pass or fail forever.

Teacher notes / suggested edits

